Copenhagen Fashion Summit announces top speakers

Copenhagen Fashion Summit, the world's leading business event on sustainability in fashion, unveils its first top speakers for the sixth edition coming up in May.

The organiser of Copenhagen Fashion Summit, Global Fashion Agenda, is pleased to announce the first prominent speakers for the 2018 event to take place at the Copenhagen Concert Hall on 15-16 May. Taking the stage in front of more than 1,000 fashion industry leaders, politicians, NGOs, members of the press and academia are fashion designer and sustainable fashion pioneer Stella McCartney and former editor in chief of Vanity Fair Graydon Carter.

Eva Kruse, CEO of Global Fashion Agenda, is proud to include the two legendary fashion names in the 2018 line-up:

“Given her profile as one of the absolutely most dedicated and inspiring fashion sustainability pioneers, Stella McCartney has been in the top of our speaker ‘wish list’ since our first edition of Copenhagen Fashion Summit back in 2009, but somehow our calendars have always conflicted. I am therefore more than thrilled to finally be able to welcome Stella as keynote speaker at the 2018 edition of the Summit. She is the impersonation of our vision for a sustainable fashion industry and the match simply couldn't be better. Another person whom I've always admired deeply is Graydon Carter - one of the most legendary magazine editors of all time – so with both him and Stella, Copenhagen Fashion Summit is certainly off to a great start.”

Last week Copenhagen Fashion Summit also announced the event's hosts: model, actress and entrepreneur Amber Valletta and editor-at-large of The Business of Fashion Tim Blanks.

Copenhagen Fashion Summit 2018, which for the first time expands as a two-day event in order to allow participants more time to gain knowledge, share experiences and discover innovative solutions, will again take place in one of the world's most atmospheric auditoriums, Copenhagen Concert Hall, designed by world-famous architect Jean Nouvel.
